Oliver Millar, to the in-expressible grief of his most amicable family, and the deep regret of all who knew him. In private life his virtues inspired the most fervant affection, As Superior to that most excellent School, his celebrity is universal, and we should, in this instance, deplore his as a public loss, if his son, in every respect qualified to succeed this loved, and venerated Father, had not determined to continue the Establishment, in his spirit. On Sunday morning, the remains of the lamented Docktor Miller were interred in Stillorgan Church-yard. The funeral was intended to be quite private, but early as it took place, and wet as the day was, his afflicted neighbours assembled in numbers - took the coffin off the hearse, and conveyed it themselves to the grave, with every mark of respect, affection, and veneration, that his exalted virtues could inspire, and their perception, sensibility, and gratitude display.

D61	Here lieth ye body of Edward Bullo ^r who departed this life ye 1 of April 1691. His wife Jane Bullor alias Ferral causes this stone to be laid here for them and their posterity.	The list of garrisons in the Marquis of Ormonde's regiment in August of 1642 included Lehaunstown and Kilgobbin castles, which were under the command of Colonel Monck. After the rebellion was eventually extinguished by Cromwell in 1649, most of these castles were confiscated by the British government because of the owner's involvement in the rebellion. Despite all this conflict, at the time of the restoration a good thatched castle was recorded to have stood in Laughanstown and was occupied by Edward Buller.

He suggested providing a banquet for the troops and tendered "his own subscription of £50 or more should it be necessary, in aid of the entertainment." It was resolved at this meeting that "steps should be taken to invite to a national entertainment in the city of Dublin, all the troops now serving in Ireland who are wearers of Crimean medals." The problem of space however, was solved by an offer from Mr. Henry Scovell, who suggested using his bonding warehouse, Stack A, at the Custom House Docks.
